A Timely and Authoritative Book

NOW READY

Texas, the Marvellous

The State of the Six Flags

Whose border line is the "scene of conflict" in our present "near war" with Mexico

Including accounts of the Spanish settlement and establishment of the Indian Missions; the unfortunate expedition and death of La Salle; the romance of the early settlement of Texas and the story of its hardy pioneers; the great ranches; the growing cities; along the troublesome Mexican border; the wonderful Gulf coast, etc., etc.

Superbly illustrated in color and in duogravure, boxed, net, $3.50

Contributed to the "See America First" Series

By NEVIN O. WINTER

Author of "Mexico and Her People of To-day." 5th Printing, $3.00

The account is written from a sympathetic standpoint and with a clear insight into the history of the State and the characteristics of its development. Because of his intimate knowledge of Mexico and Mexicans, Mr. Winter is able to trace the dissemblances of character in the two races that settled in Texas, the cause that led to their inability to coalesce, and the reason for the supremacy of the Americans.

The SEE AMERICA FIRST SERIES already includes:

James' CALIFORNIA: ROMANTIC AND BEAUTIFUL Net $3.50
Anderson's OLD PANAMA AND CASTILLA DEL ORO Net $3.50
Lindsay's PANAMA AND THE CANAL TODAY $3.00
Murphy's THREE WONDERLANDS OF THE AMERICAN WEST Net $3.00
Murphy's ON SUNSET HIGHWAYS Net $3.00

Check up the entire series. Also "Mexico and Her People of Today." Be Prepared!

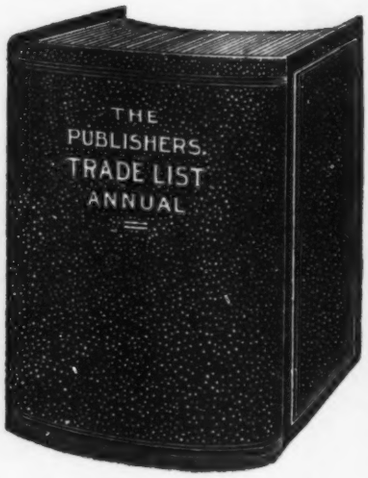
A Chance to Make Yourself "Solid"

DEAR MR. BOOKSELLER:



The Solid Book that Makes You "Solid"

Here is a tip! Nearly every bookseller has one or more "very special" customers—those who buy heaps of books in the course of the year. In some cases the "special" is a librarian, in others a school principal; frequently it is a private buyer whose thirst for books seems never to be quenched, so to speak.

To make yourself "solid" with these good people why not send them a copy of this year's TRADE LIST ANNUAL with your compliments? It would certainly provide them with material enough in the way of book catalogues! It would, best of all, be a graceful recognition of their trade and would be graciously accepted in the same spirit.

A dozen or more of the wise ones in the business every year order extra copies for this purpose.

And as each copy costs but $2.00, how could you possibly flatter a good customer so handsomely at less expense?

Think this suggestion over and be sure to send your order in before August 31st.

Yours for service,

IMPORTANT EARLY FALL NOVELS

For August

The Girl at Big Loon Post

By GEORGE VAN SCHAICK

The author of the popular SWEETAPPLE COVE and THE SON OF THE OTTER has written here a deeply moving story of the great north woods, of life and love at a Hudson's Bay trading post, of chicanery and intrigue, of bravery and devotion. Dr. Van Schaick knows his country and few writers can compete with him as a story-teller in his chosen field. Like his previous books, THE GIRL AT BIG LOON POST is marked by an unaffected sincerity—which adds zest to the reader's pleasure.

12mo. Cloth. With a frontispiece in color and three other illustrations in black and white by I. D. Sisson.

The Yet Unnamed Novel

By ARTHUR HODGES

Pincus Hood, art dealer, yearns to bring to the young and struggling artists of the day opportunities for recognition. How he succeeds in getting wealthy patronesses for his "Idea" and how eagerly social climbers respond to his appeal is one phase of this delightful art-society novel. The ambitions and romance of Christopher Mallory—Pincus' first artist protégé—form the main thread of the story. Only once in a long time is American literature enriched with so fine a book. Charm, tenderness, whimsical humor, human nature acting and reacting naturally, spontaneously—these are some of the qualities that arouse the reader's enthusiasm.

12mo. Cloth. Illustrated by F. R. Gruger. Net, $1.40.

The Van Haavens

By C. HILTON-TURVEY

This might be called the story of a family. The elder Van Haaven would have spoken of THE Family and would have allowed modern life to engulf them even while they resented its encroachments. On the shoulders of young Willoughby Van Haaven fell all the burden of sustaining the family in its struggle with the world and the story of his fight is inspiring. THE VAN HAAVENS is a novel in the best sense of that much-abused word; it is many-sided in its presentation of human nature and the author's insight into life stimulates the reader's interest to that ultimate satisfaction—unforced enthusiasm and complete enjoyment.

12mo. Cloth. With four illustrations and a wrapper in full color by H. R. Ballinger.

Net, $1.35

The Beloved Son

By FANNY KEMBLE JOHNSON

To the readers of the more important American magazines, the name of Fanny Kemble Johnson stands for the best in the short story. In THE BELOVED SON she has written her first novel, and to the writing of it she has brought all the skill and charm that have marked her shorter fiction — and more than that, she has found in the novel opportunity for a breadth of view commensurate with her depth of insight. As a novel of real people, as a love idyl and, above all, as a portrayal of the beautiful relation of father to son the book is distinguished.

Mr. Gage's beautiful painting, reproduced for the wrapper, makes this one of the most attractive books of the season.

Net, $1.35.

The Cab of the Sleeping Horse

By John Reed Scott, author of "The Colonel of the Red Hussars," etc. A story of diplomatic intrigue in Washington that moves swiftly and without a halt from the moment the hero finds the crushed roses and cypher message in the driverless cab until the last line of the last page.

The More Excellent Way

A tale of modern society and the divorce question, by Cyrus Townsend Brady, with the scenes laid in New York, Sorrento, Bermuda, and Reno. Rarely has an author, without attempt at preaching, written a story so subtly influential, or so provocative of thought and yet so dramatic.

To the Minute

Two stories by Anna Katharine Green, the famous author of the "Leavenworth Case." "To the Minute" is a story of mystery, love and villainy; the scene, the forbidding house of a deceased miser. "Scarlet and Black" is a story of intrigue laid in New York, the principal character a Russian woman of noble birth.

The Quest of the Golden Valley

Belmore Brown, who wrote the stirring account of "The Conquest of Mount McKinley" has written a splendid story for boys which imparts the whole lore of the frontier and law of the wild. Eight vivid illustrations, by the author, accompany the text.

Connie Morgan in Alaska

You know the power of James B. Hendryx, from his story (for grown ups) of lumber camps and Broadway, "The Promise." Here is one for younger readers, of a boy with pluck and hardihood in the Northland. There are twenty fascinating illustrations.

Betty Trevor

By Mrs. G. de Horne Vaizey. A wholesome and refreshing novel for girls, with a charming seventeen-year-old heroine and a hero who bravely redeems a past offense. Mrs. Vaizey's natural charm of style, which has been so often noticed in her books for elder readers, is still more emphasized in these stories for girls. Illustrated.

A College Girl

By Mrs. G. de Horne Vaizey. Another story by the author of "An Unknown Lover," "Lady Cassandra," etc. As the title indicates, this is a tale of college life, the scene laid at Newnham. Though primarily a story for girls, it cannot fail to prove entertaining reading for many grown-ups. Illustrated.

Betty's Beautiful Nights

By Marian Fenner. One night in each month Betty steps forth into the wonderful garden of nature and there helps the fairies in their work of changing the seasons. Clara Burd's fascinating illustrations help us to see a little of what Betty saw.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH THE WOULD-BE BOOKSELLER?

"AN order from a new prospect in a new town is worth three or four times as much to us as a re-order from one of our old dealers," said a manufacturer recently. "It shows we are growing." And this represents the attitude of the manufacturer in practically every line. The Packard sales promotion organization, for instance, aims to put that car into every locality in the country in which an agency can be profitably operated. The entire country is mapped out and whether the actual promotion work is done from the central office or through state agencies, somebody is responsible for securing the new local agents. An advantageous locality is gone over carefully, the best dealer possible obtained, and then he is carefully nursed along by letter and by personal visits until he gets on his feet.

How different is the case of the book-trade. Here the birth of a new bookstore is usually a haphazard, accidental affair. The newcomer sufficiently venturesome to enter the ranks of the retail book-trade is patted on the back more or less perfunctorily, undergoes a more or less inconclusive financial scrutiny, and has books doled out to him on order by jobber and publisher. Not that certain men, when applied to, are not glad to give advice—and very excellent advice—to prospective booksellers, but so far as the book-trade as a whole is concerned entering into it is an event unprepared for.

Just at present there seems to be a particular need for some person or body in the trade to be active in the promotion and organization of new retail outlets. The widespread and genuine interest aroused in many parts of the country by Earl Barnes' article in the Atlantic Monthly on bookselling as a possible new profession for women,* has opened up probably a larger number of possible new stores than any other single suggestion in the history of the American book-trade. The best evidence of this wide-spread interest among women is furnished by the Sunwise Turn Book Shop in New York City, itself a new shop run by women. Owing to the publicity which this shop has received we are told that it has averaged about two calls each week from other women who wanted to start bookshops of their own in other parts of the country, and desired advice. The Sunwise Turn has even received in two instances substantial money offers from individuals outside the trade who desired that the proprietors of the Sunwise Turn Book Shop come out and start similar book shops in their cities. In the majority of cases the Sunwise Turn inquirers have been either college women, trained librarians or other persons with real bookselling possibilities, women who, it is true, knew little or nothing of the actual details of bookselling but who knew something about business methods or books or both and desired further information regarding the practical details of the trade.

If one adds to these inquiries which have come to the Sunwise Turn during its brief existence those which have come and are coming regularly to individual booksellers and publishers, to the President and other officers of the American Booksellers' Association, and to the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, as well as those which have died without even these attempts at answer, it seems regretfully apparent that book publishers, considered simply as manufacturers seeking further outlets for their products, may be losing opportunities which might very well be grasped.

But what, speaking practically, is to be done? Shall such inquirers be sent to the American Booksellers' Association? After all the establishment of new retail outlets cannot fairly be called a bookseller's problem. The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY stands ready at all times to answer questions. It has in the past frequently advised prospective booksellers, and it gladly invites further inquiries and will do its best to solve individual problems. The need, however, is for something more active and positive than any sort of question box. It would seem rather that there should be—this seems clearly a responsibility of the publishers—some sort of a central promotion bureau whose business it would be not merely to answer definite questions or even to give detailed advice to individual applicants, but which would map out the country from a bookselling standpoint, would determine the now uncovered but potentially good book towns, would analyze their special problems and special opportunities, would, by solicitation and advertisement, seek prospective booksellers to enter such towns, would go over step by step with each prospect his fitness—personal, financial and educational—for the place he seeks to fill, would advise him practically and thoroughly in the thousand and one details in which he would seek advice, would suggest the sort of stock best fitted for his community, both in quantity and quality, would tell him the most economical way to buy it, and explain to him the solution of a few of the problems he would meet with in attempting to sell it. In short, such a promotion bureau would be a sort of new booksellers' nursery, whose only aim would be to increase the bookstore birth rate and reduce the high mortality in new bookstores.

Such a work is obviously difficult. Obviously it requires for its success the effective management of a thoroughly trained, practical bookman, a man who would have to be paid a commensurate salary. Obviously, also, the necessary incidental expenses of such promotion work would be large. The Publishers' Co-operative Bureau would seem admirably fitted to take up just such a work, if it is not too full with plans for its co-operative catalogues and other publicity work to have either the time or funds to take on another work so important as this.

It would seem a great misfortune, if sooner or later the Publishers' Co-operative Bureau, or some similar body, did not have an opportunity to attempt a service of this sort. The book-trade is one of the few which, instead of decrying additions to its ranks, encourages them, seeing—and correctly—that more book stores, in the present scarcity of them, mean, not greater competition in selling books, but a greater sale of books for all stores, in short, a rejuvenation of bookselling. The publisher, in having the cordial co-operation of the retail trade, has his task made so much the easier. Nevertheless, the expense of such a promotion bureau, adequately equipped and carried on, would be so great that it must of necessity be a co-operative venture. Of course, not all the publishers would co-operate. All the men of any trade or profession will not unite on any co-operative course of action, however desirable. But a sufficiently large number would, we believe, to make the plan practicable and valuable.

Those authors who favor affiliation with the American Federation of Labor on the ground of co-operation to be obtained in securing desired reforms are put into an amusingly contradictory position by the latter's denunciation of the price maintenance bill now before Congress, which means so much to authors. The position of the Federation of Labor was stated by President Samuel Gompers this week in a letter to the National Trade Association as follows: "Regarding the subject matter of the Stephens bill, which came before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor just held at headquarters in this city [Washington], I beg to advise you that the executive council declared itself in opposition to the bill as being inimical to the interests of organized labor and to the public generally, and that, therefore, the measure should be defeated." It seems inconsistent that the labor unions, whose very existence is a protest against unregulated cut-throat competition in matters of hours and wages, should thus league themselves with the advocates of unregulated competition; and it would be a strange eventuality indeed if, after the publishers' long and costly fight to maintain prices on and a trade for the author's product they should be denounced by the Authors' Union of the American Federation of Labor for thus acting, in Mr. Gompers' words, in a manner "inimical to the interests of organized labor"!

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION TO HOLD HEARING ON PAPER SITUATION

Pursuant to a resolution of the United States Senate, the Federal Trade Commission is making an investigation regarding the print paper industry in order to determine whether or not there has been an undue increase in the prices of news print paper. In connection with this investigation the Commission will have a hearing, beginning at 10 a. m. on August 1, 1916, at its office in Washington to which all newspaper publishers, periodical publishers, paper manufacturers, or others who are users of paper in any form or otherwise interested in this investigation are invited to come and state their views. Any who are unable to attend but who desire to submit any information to the Commission in writing are cordially invited to do so.

Information has already been obtained from a considerable number of newspaper publishers as well as from representatives of the manufacturers of news print paper. The Commission has also sent out schedules to all the daily papers of the country and to a large number of weekly papers with numerous specific inquiries as to the prices paid for print paper, the quantities obtained and other matters pertinent to the investigation.

The Commission has a staff of accountants actively engaged in examining the books of the chief manufacturers of news print paper in order to determine the costs of production, profits and other pertinent matters regarding the conduct of their business. Special agents have also been sent out to obtain from jobbers of news print paper such information as is necessary regarding the prices paid and received by them.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION CALLS FOR REDUCTION IN PAPER CONSUMPTION

The American Newspaper Publishers' Association is sending to publishers throughout the country a statement of the scarcity, both present and prospective, of news print, accompanied by six suggested methods of economy, to each of which the Association asks publishers to subscribe. "During the first five months of the present year," the statement reads, "the news print mills of the United States and Canada delivered approximately 800,000 tons of news print, an increase of about 13 per cent. over deliveries of the corresponding months of the previous year. This is at the rate of about 1,900,000 tons per annum, or 150,000 tons in excess of 1915 deliveries.

"Notwithstanding this largely increased production of news print—approximately double the normal average increase—there has been so great consumption that the mills have not supplied the demand. and there is much concern regarding the future.

"During the first five months of this year 26,901 tons of news print were exported from the United States, as compared with 18,862 tons for the same period of 1915, and 19,102 tons for the same period during 1914. During the same period imports from Canada increased over 63,000 tons.

"Ordinarily, mills expect during the latter part of May to begin to accumulate stock for the fall and winter demand. We are informed that up to the present time there has been no appreciable evidence of reduction of consumption and that leads to the thought that if consumption of news print be not immediately reduced there may be a greater shortage of supply next winter than has been the case during the past months. This thought is emphasized by the fact that machines to produce any material increase of new tonnage seem not to have been provided by the manufacturers."

The Association especially urges its members to "write to-day to the mill or broker supplying you with news print, urging them to endeavor to keep their mills running Sundays until the present situation is relieved."

The six suggested economies are as follows:

"We agree that after this date we will discontinue entirely all exchanges and free copies, except one copy to each regular advertiser or agent placing business with us."

"After this date we agree to send to all advertisers and agents papers or copies of their advertisements cut from papers spoiled in pressroom or other unsold copies, which papers are to be sent on the day following the day of publishing of the advertising."

"We agree that hereafter we will keep within one per cent. of papers delivered by our own forces, which are sent out by us to be sold C. O. D., or to be paid for after delivery."

"We agree that after this date we will discontinue absolutely making allowances of any kind for papers delivered to newsdealers or news agents and which they are unable to sell."

"We agree that the size of our paper each week shall average in pages not more than the average in the corresponding week one year ago."

"We agree that we will reduce by eight per cent. the average number of pages used each day of each week below the average for the corresponding days of each week one year ago."

PLAN FOR AUTHORS' UNION AROUSES PROTEST

We reprint below two communications on the subject of the proposed affiliation of the Authors' League of America with the American Federation of Labor. The first is a communication to the New York Times by Robert J. Shores, a member of the League, the second a communication from George Haven Putnam, both summing up the case against affiliation.

In connection with the proposed affiliation of the Authors' League of America with the American Federation of Labor, says Mr. Shores, it is curious to note the naive assumption of the Committee on Affiliation that the only possible objection to this connection must rest upon the distaste of artists for anything which puts them in the light of laboring men. "If you are not a snob," the committee says in effect, "you will be glad to join the union," quite ignoring the fact that labor unionists are the snobs, the aristocrats, and in many instances, the autocrats of the laboring world.

There are many serious objections to the proposed affiliation; objections which must occur to every author giving the matter more than a passing thought. In the first place, the Authors' League was formed for the purpose of furthering the business interests of its members. I, for one, do not believe that affiliation with the American Federation of Labor would serve this purpose. Unlike the actors and school teachers cited by the committee, authors do not work upon salary. A piece of literature is nothing more nor less than an arrangement of words. To regulate the market price of words, in such a wordy world, is a task, in my opinion, quite beyond the powers and capabilities of the earnest and somewhat visionary members of the league who are supporting the Committee on Affiliation. You can no more force a man to join a union before you permit him to write than you can force him to join a union before you permit him to speak. If it were possible to do such a thing, it would be the most iniquitous, the most pernicious of crimes against the body politic.

But it will be possible for the American Federation of Labor in case of affiliation, to bring undue influence to bear upon those authors who are members of the league. The American Federation of Labor, whatever its leaders may now say, would never permit an author, outspoken in his condemnation of any sort of labor unionism, to remain within its ranks.

And even if we allow, for the sake of the argument, that the federation is sincere in its professed desire to give us something for nothing, what can it give us that we could not get for ourselves by concerted action? Is there any more need for an authors' union than there is for a lawyers' union? The lawyers have an association; so have we. We are free agents. We are not forced to accept terms unfavorable to us. Successful authors do not accept unfavorable terms. If there are customs in business detrimental to our welfare, we need only refuse to conform to these customs and they will soon cease to be. The federation can aid us only by calling strikes, and this the federation will not do unless in some way, either by the support of our pens or the support of our pocketbooks, we stand behind all labor union movements and thus give value received.

According to the Committee on Affiliation, the arrangement is to be a very nice one with all of the advantages on the side of the authors. The authors will be able to coerce moving picture magnates, book publishers, and magazine editors with a threat of trouble among the camera men, the actors, or the printers. The authors, on the other hand, are to be under no obligation to assist other organizations affiliated with the federation. Does any sane author believe this? Does any member of the committee innocently suppose that the authors will not be assessed to support strikes called among the workers in other lines? Already the members of the league have been called upon to contribute funds for the striking garment workers. Now it is a request. But with the affiliation an accomplished fact, it would soon be a demand.

Mr. Putnam says: A committee of the Authors' League of America has, in a recent report, formally recommended to the members of the league that it will be desirable for the Authors' League to come into affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

It specifies as one of the more important of the advantages which, in the opinion of the committee, will be secured through such affiliation the service that the Federation of Labor will be able to give to the league in its negotiations for contracts in the publishing, the magazine and the theatrical business.

The committee states that the adjustment of any differences that might arise with moving picture producers, theatrical managers, publishers, and others would be very much furthered by the active support of the unions constituting the federation. The report goes on to say, the particular union whose co-operations was desired could then aid us in any way it might see fit, even to the extent of a strike. That is to say, the authors, who should be the intellectual leaders of the community, are, it seems, prepared to follow the example of organized labor. They propose that issues in which they are concerned shall be adjusted not on the merits of the case, but under the pressure of outside influences, and, when convenient, by the use of outside violence.

The principal charge against the labor unions of this country is that, in place of endeavoring to bring about adjustments based upon the conditions of the market and the possibilities of the market, and arrived at through an unrestricted interchange of views, they insist upon bringing in the element of force. They take the ground that unless their views shall be accepted no other laborers shall be permitted to carry on the work. The authors, in looking forward to adjusting by these means issues connected with literary property, are giving their practical approval to the principles and the methods which have governed the actions of the labor unions in the country.

A second possible advantage specified by the committee is that affiliation with organized labor will "help the league in its endeavor to secure universal copyright and to put the United States in the international copyright league, thereby automatically securing worldwide copyright protection for any matter copyrighted in America."

If the members of this special committee had taken the pains to consult the chairman of its own copyright committee, who has direct knowledge of the history of copyright legislation in this country, they would have been informed that the only obstacle that stood in the way of the acceptance by the United States of the Berne Convention was the opposition of the organized unions. It is the policy of the Federation of Labor that each union should work in behalf of any undertaking that the other unions have in train, and it was in this way that when the American typographical unions took the position that the United States must accept not a worldwide but a restricted copyright, with conditions which were connected with the copyright law of no other country, they were able, through the co-operation of the affiliated unions, to bring sufficient pressure to bear upon Congress to secure the acceptance of its views against the contentions submitted on behalf of the authors, artists, composers, and publishers.

In the face of this history, it is, to say the least, rather absurd to assume that the Federation of Labor could be made serviceable in securing for the United States a civilized copyright system and the acceptance of a worldwide copyright.*

Further, it is to be borne in mind that service cannot be secure without incurring the obligation to render equivalent service. If the Authors' League expects to secure the co-operation of the affiliated unions to the extent of sympathetic strikes, if necessary, to help to obtain favorable decisions on issues in which its members are concerned, it must be prepared to meet a demand from the Federation of Labor for similar co-operation on its part in issues in which any union belonging to the federation may have interests at stake. If, for instance, it might again be found convenient by some one of these unions to blow up a newspaper office with twenty or thirty occupants (a group that would probably include some literary workers), the Authors' League might very properly be called upon to put its pens at the service of the Federation of Labor for defending the act as constituting not "murder," but "legitimate warfare."

*[This argument of Mr. Putnam's was answered by Louis Sherwin in the New York Times as follows: "That very fact is one of the strong reasons why we recommend affiliation. As long as we remain outside of the American Federation of Labor we shall never be able to overcome the opposition of the unions. To the average Congressman, the Authors' League represents merely an organization of some 900 or 1000 people, many of whom do not vote. What chance could their arguments have in comparison with the millions of votes in the American Federation of Labor? But once the Authors' League becomes a union it will be possible to approach the typographical unions upon a fraternal basis to show them that the benefits accruing to them from the attitude they have maintained are slight, while the injuries and losses inflicted upon American authors are very great. After the opposition of the unions is withdrawn it will be an easy matter to procure the admission of the United States to the International Copyright Union."]

ROTARY BOOKSELLERS HOLD SECTIONAL MEETING IN CINCINNATI

At the recent International Rotary Convention at Cincinnati a sectional meeting of booksellers was held in the Stewart & Kidd Bookstore. The meeting developed an enthusiastic discussion of present day book-selling tendencies. Among those present were: John Kidd, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Booksellers' Association, John Wood, and Ward Macauley, the ex-president and present president of the Association. It is probable that Rotary booksellers will organize and will no doubt work in harmony with the American Booksellers Association, whose membership includes quite a number of prominent Rotarians.

During the meeting, ex-President Wood was presented with a beautiful watch, the gift of the American Booksellers' Association.

BOOK-TRADE ASSOCIATIONS

OHIO BOOKSELLERS TO ORGANIZE

THE state booksellers' association habit is spreading rapidly. Last week we announced the organization of a New Jersey Association, this week Ohio—and next week who will it be?

The First Annual Convention of Ohio Booksellers and Stationers will be held at Delaware, Ohio, on August 3rd and 4th, beginning at noon on Thursday, August 3rd, and ending with a banquet tendered by the C. M. Barnes-Wilcox Company, of Chicago, at 6:30 on Friday night. Every dealer in Ohio is invited.

Rates at the Hotel Allen in Delaware are $2.50 and $3.00 per day, and at the Hotel Elmont, European, $.75 and $1.00 per day. In order that the committee may know what to expect, and in order that the Barnes-Wilcox Company may know what arrangements to make for the banquet, they ask booksellers to notify the University Book Store, Hardin & Gallant, or the S. T. Lemley Co. at once There will be no set program and no set addresses except the opening address which will be delivered by John J. Wood, of the Burrows Bros. Co. of Cleveland.

COMMUNICATIONS

COLLIER'S WEEKLY'S SHORT STORIES

Havre Aubert, Magdalen Islands, P. Q., Canada, July 3, 1916.

Editor the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

I shall be grateful if you will permit me to rectify through your columns a serious misstatement of fact in certain advertisements of Collier's Weekly current in the July magazines.

Referring to my annual analysis in the Boston Transcript and elsewhere of the American short story, and to my lists of distinctive stories, these advertisements state that during 1915 Collier's Weekly published "roll-of-honor" stories in 90% of their 52 issues. Instead of 90%, my lists credit Collier's Weekly with 19%. Instead of 46 "roll-of-honor" stories, my list shows 9 stories. No magazine in America published 46 "roll-of-honor" stories in 1915.

During 1915, Collier's Weekly published 142 stories, of which I found 46 "distinctive." But even granting that 32% of the stories published were "distinctive," I fail to trace any grounds for the high percentage (90%) quoted in these advertisements, which go on to state that "roll-of-honor" stories appeared in 46 out of 52 issues.

Accepting the lowest grade of merit which I found it possible to chronicle, I still find that 17 of the 52 issues contained no story whose title appeared on any of my lists.

I can only suppose that the figures quoted by Collier's Weekly are based on some indirect quotation from my lists which has come to its attention, particularly as the correct lists show that Collier's Weekly ranks second in number of distinctive stories among all American magazines, being surpassed numerically only by Harper's Magazine. On a percentage basis Collier's Weekly ranks ninth in order of merit among American magazines of fiction.

OBITUARY NOTES

LOUIS KRONIG, a salesman for Grosset & Dunlap, died suddenly as the result of an operation at Kingston, N. Y., where he had gone for a vacation. Although but thirty years of age he had been with this house nearly fifteen years, having joined it shortly after it started in business. He is survived by his wife.

AMANDA M. DOUGLAS, author of girls' books, died in Newark, N. J., on July 19, at the age of 85. Miss Douglas was born in New York, July 14, 1831. Her earliest literary efforts were contributions to the New York Ledger, the Saturday Evening Post and the Ladies' Friend. The first book, "In Trust," appeared in 1866. A story entitled "Larry," published in 1897, won a $2000 prize from the Youth's Companion. Her many other books were: Sydnie Adriance, 1867; Stephen Dane, 1868; Six Kathie Books, 1868-70; Claudia, 1869; Home Nook, 1870; The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe, 1870; Whom Kathie Married, 1871; Lost in a Great City, 1872; Seven Daughters, 1873; Nelly Kinnard's Kingdom, 1874; Heroes of the Crusades; From Hand to Mouth, 1875; Hope Mills, 1876; A Woman's Inheritance, 1877; The Foes of Her Household, 1878; A Modern Adam and Eve, 1879; Out of the Wreck, 1880; The Fortune of the Faradays, 1881; The Heirs of Bradley House, 1882; Osborne of Arrochar, 1883; Bertha Wray's New Name, 1884; In the King's Country, 1886; Floyd Grandon's Honor, 1892; In Wild Rose Time, 1894; Her Place in the World, 1895; Sherburne Series, 6 vols., 1895-1900; Larry ($2000 prize story, Youth's Companion), 1897; Little Girl in New York, 1897; Little Girl in Boston, 1897; Little Girl in Philadelphia, 1898; Little Girl in Washington, 1899; A Question of Silence, 1901; Almost as Good as a Boy, 1901; Little Girl in Old New Orleans, 1902; Little Girl in Old Detroit, 1903; Little Girl in Old Chicago; Little Girl in Old San Francisco; Helen Grant's School Days; Helen Grant's Friends; Helen Grant's Year at Aldred House; Helen Grant in College, 1906; A Little Girl in Old Quebec, 1906; Helen Grant, Graduate; Helen Grant, Teacher, 1909; A Little Girl in Old Pittsburg, 1909; Helen Grant's Decision, 1910; Helen Grant's Harvest Year, 1911; Children in the Little Old Red House, 1912; Red House Children at Grafton, 1913.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY died suddenly of paralysis at his home in Indianapolis on July 22. A shy and sensitive man, who shunned crowds and hated to be made the object of public demonstrations, he avoided the attempts of biographers to write his life, even concealing his exact age and the incidents of his childhood. It is known, however, that he was born at Greenfield, Ind., about 1853, that he early left home to sell patent medicine, that he became a sign painter and that he broke into print as a poet in Kokomo, Ind., in the seventies with "Leonanie," his famous "Poe Hoax." By an arrangement with the publisher of the Dispatch, of Kokomo, Ind., Mr. Riley wrote "Leonanie," a poem in the style of Edgar Allan Poe, which was offered to the public as a hitherto unpublished product of the genius of Poe. This poem, it was stated, had been found written on the fly leaf of a copy of Ainsworth's Dictionary. A traveler had discovered the treasure in the sitting room of an old inn near Richmond, Va., and had taken it away with him. The publication of the poem and the accompanying story excited interest throughout the country. When called upon to produce the book in which it was written, Mr. Riley obtained a copy of Ainsworth's Dictionary, and upon a fly leaf Samuel Richards, a painter, wrote in it the poem in imitation of the chirography of Poe. After the controversy had waged for months Mr. Riley confessed. William Cullen Bryant, then editor of the New York Evening Post, was particularly severe in denunciation of the hoax. For some years thereafter Mr. Riley wrote occasional poems and acted with a traveling theatrical troupe. He might have remained an actor all his life except for the great success of the dialect poems, the poems of Hoosier life which have endeared him to thousands of Americans on account of their unobtrusive kindliness. Mr. Riley settled in Indianapolis in the early eighties. Publication of books of poems year after year brought wealth and wide recognition. In 1902 he received the degree of master of arts from Yale University, and in 1904 the University of Pennsylvania conferred upon him the degree of doctor of letters. Indiana University bestowed an LL.D. upon him. In July, 1911, the poet presented to the city of Indianapolis property valued at $75,000 for a site for a public library and school administration building. He left no will and his book rights are said to have been left confidentially in the hands of his brother-in-law and W. C. Bobbs, his publisher and friend. In 1910 Mr. Riley suffered his first paralytic stroke, but during the last two or three years he had made a remarkable recovery. His birthday last year was made the occasion for a nation-wide demonstration of esteem. As a tribute to her great poet Indiana caused his body to be placed in the Capitol Building through whose draped portals thousands of his former fellow citizens passed silently to view all that remained of the author of "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," and "Out to Old Aunt Mary's." His many published volumes include: "The Old Swimmin' Hole and 'Leven More Poems"; "The Boss Girl and Other Sketches"; "Afterwhiles"; "Old-Fashioned Roses" (pub. in England); "Pipes o' Pan at Zekesbury"; "Rhymes of Childhood"; "Flying Islands of the Night"; "Green Fields and Running Brooks"; "Armazindy"; "A Child-World"; "Neighborly Poems"; "Home Folks"; "Poems Here at Home," 1901; "Rubaiyat of Doc. Sifers," 1901; "The Book of Joyous Children," 1902; "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," 1903; "Out to Old Aunt Mary's," 1904; "A Defective Santa Claus," 1904; "Home Again With Me," 1905; "The Boys of the Old Glee Club," 1905; "While the Heart Beats Young," 1906; "Raggedy Man," 1907; "Morning" (poems), 1907; "The Little Orphant Annie Book," 1907; "Old Schoolday Romances," 1909; "The Girl I Loved," 1910; "Songs of Home," 1910; "When She Was About Sixteen," 1911; "The Lockerbie Book" (poems) 1911; "Down Around the River and Other Poems," 1911; "When the Frost is on the Punkin and Other Poems," 1911; "All the Year Round," 1912; "Knee Deep in June and Other Poems," 1912; "The Old Swimmin' Hole and Other Poems," 1912; "The Prayer-Perfect and Other Poems," 1912; "Good-bye Jim," 1913; "A Song of Long Ago," 1913; "He and I," 1913; "When My Dreams Come True," 1913; "The Rose," 1913; "Her Beautiful Eyes," 1913; "Away," 1913; "Do They Miss Me," 1913; "The Riley Baby Book," 1913; "Songs of Friendship," 1915; the Biographical Edition of Riley's Complete Works, 1913.

PERIODICAL NOTES

THE DIAL PUBLISHING CO. has acquired from Herbert S. Browne and Waldo R. Browne the complete ownership of The Dial. Waldo R. Browne has retired as editor, and Herbert S. Browne as business manager.

ERMAN J. RIDGWAY has retired as editor-in-chief of the Butterick publications, including Everybody's Magazine, the Butterick Trio, and Adventure. He retains his directorship in the Butterick Company. Just what his future plans will be has not been announced. Mr. Ridgway became identified with one of the Munsey enterprises soon after leaving college, working up to be general director of these publications. After some ten years with Mr. Munsey, Mr. Ridgway, with George W. Wilder, president of the Butterick Company, and John Adams Thayer, bought Everybody's.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES

ETHEL HUESTON'S "Prudence Says So," a sequel to "Prudence of the Parsonage," is announced by the Bobbs-Merrill Co. for August 25.

"EPISODES OF A QUAINT COUNTRYSIDE" by John M. Sooy is published by the Wendell Sooy Publishing Co., of Philadelphia. It is a story of a village on the Atlantic seaboard in the early forties.

RARELY DOES A novel contain so many and such excellent drawings as does Robert Chambers' "The Girl Philippa," just published by Appleton. There are thirty-two drawings by Frank Craig—every one of them above the average as book illustrations go.

GIMBEL BROTHERS, with stores in New York, Philadelphia, and Milwaukee, have announced their support of the Stephens-Ashurst bill. The American Fair Trade League also announces the support of twenty-two additional department stores in New Jersey and Maryland.

WITH THE ADDITION of the new volume, "Texas, the Marvellous," the Page Co.'s See America First Series now includes six titles, the other five being, "On Sunset Highways," "Three Wonderlands of the American West," "Panama and the Canal Today," "Old Panama and Castilla del Oro," and "California: Romantic and Beautiful."

SMALL, MAYNARD & Co. announce for August a new novel by George Van Schaick, the physician-author who wrote "Sweetapple Cove" and "The Son of the Otter." The new book, "The Girl at Big Loon Post," is a love story laid in a Hudson's Bay trading post. The author is said to know this country thoroughly.

THE AVERAGE YOUNG mother is eager for new books on baby care by people who know, regardless of how many works on the subject she may already own. Another book for her little library is the "Mothercraft Manual" by Mary L. Read, director of the School of Mothercraft, New York City, which Little, Brown & Co. will publish soon.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. announce an increase in the list prices of a number of their important publications. The new 1916 catalogue with the new prices will be ready for distribution about August 1st. A list of the books of which the prices have been changed will be sent on request. The increase in prices on certain high class publications has been found necessary on account of the advance in the cost of production.

KATHLEEN NORRIS, who can write a "woman" story which does not lapse into pretty sentimentalities, tells in her new novel, "The Heart of Rachel," published August 1 by Doubleday, Page & Co., the story of a marriage involving problems that might come up in the house of your next door neighbor—or even in the house of his next door neighbor. Novels like Mrs. Norris's, in the language of the quack advertisements, have saved thousands of homes, and may well be pushed by those practical idealists who are always looking for that happy combination of good literature and good sales.

RARELY HAS THERE been such a good excuse for books about a presidential candidate as is afforded this year by the candidacy of Charles E. Hughes. Since Mr. Hughes has not spoken as yet, there has been a general searching through his previous speeches and decisions in an effort to find out where he stands. Of decided interest in this connection is the announcement by the Putnams of an enlarged edition of "The Addresses of Charles Evans Hughes," and by Dutton of "Charles E. Hughes: the statesman as shown in the opinions of the jurist." The former will contain of new matter several additional addresses, the telegram and letter of acceptance of the Presidential candidate and an introduction by Jacob Gould Schurman. The latter, which will be published about August 10, will consist of a selection by Judge William L. Ransom of pregnant passages from supreme court decisions.

AN INTERESTING PUBLISHING story is wrapped up in the announcement by Henry Holt & Co. of the publication of Grace King's "The Pleasant Ways of St. Medard" in August. In "Gossip in Criticism" in the Atlantic Monthly, Edward Garnett wrote: "'Pioneers' belongs to a precious, if small, class of American novels which it is difficult to praise too highly. Even higher, in its literary art, must we rank Grace King's 'The Pleasant Ways of St. Medard,' a story rare in its historical significance. This poignant lament for the South, at the close of the Civil War, rehearses a woman's lingering memories of the charms and grace of the New Orleans atmosphere, and of the poignant humiliation suffered by a ruined family. Will not its exquisite shades of feeling, delicate in vibrating sadness, give this novel a permanent place as an American literary classic?" Immediately book-shops were besieged with requests for the book. Nobody had ever heard of it. Finally it was located in New Orleans, an unpublished manuscript which Edward Garnett had read some years before and the subsequent publication of which he had apparently taken for granted.

Adams, S: Hopkins. The Unspeakable Perk; with front. by G: Ellis Wolfe. Bost., Houghton Mifflin. c. 289 p. D $1.25 n.

Lively tale laid on an island of the Caribbean Sea, where the daughter of a rich American meets a quaint character passing as Perkins and disguised behind goggles. "Perk" immediately falls in love with the engaging heroine, and she, without quite realizing it, gradually falls in love with the character behind the unattractive disguise. After a series of adventures and misunderstandings, including a toy revolution, "Perk" turns out to be all that he seemed, but didn't look.

Anstey, F. [pseud. for T: Anstey Guthrie] In brief authority. N. Y., Doran. 10+413 p. D $1.35 n.

How in the most unheard of way, the whole stuffy, suburban family of Stimpson fell asleep and dreamed the same dream. It was the most whimsical and out-of-the-world dream, in which they had the chance to act the rôles of great personages. They did not succeed at all as their conceit had always assured them they would. So they were all glad when they woke up, to get another try at doing their "bit" in the ordinary world.

One day she was but a slip of a cashier in a little French café near the border of Belgium. The next she was involved in a desperate struggle waged by the secret service systems of Europe. This sudden fate which thrust her about just before the European War broke out, also caught up an English officer, an American artist, a Sister of Charity, and made them chief figures in her story. And a dramatic story it was, with happiness eclipsed by danger's shadow until the very end.

Anglo-Indian novel which includes the story of the Tirah campaign in which Thea Desmond got her baptism of fire. She has the strength of personality that one would expect in her father's daughter. Officers in the regiment who are close friends are rivals when it comes to her: of these Vincent Leigh, liked by Desmond himself, is perhaps her favorite. He lacks the bent of mind that makes a great soldier. But his love for Thea holds him to an ideal of service, and there he is when the great chance comes that makes him a soldier through and through.

"Thou shalt not spend more than thou earnest" is a commandment everyone breaks, Daphne discovered. Clay Winburn spent more than he could afford during his wooing of her, her father frowned at what her trousseau would cost, but his love was stronger than his business prudence. In New York, Daphne found her own brother, pulled down by the extravagance of his parasitic wife. Daphne was brought sharply up against the realization that if she married Clay, she, too, would hold him back. So she broke her engagement and started to support herself. As an actress she was a dismal failure. Then she tried one way after another. At last she "made good," and concluding chapters tell whether her business success satisfied her.

The smug town resented Pandora's Spanish-like beauty, the mystery of her birth, and the undaunted way she and Elizabeth Seaton lived their own lives as artist and writer. When Captain Seaton comes home, Pandora recognizes him as the man who was her lover in a mad episode in Spain. He is sure his feeling is all in the past. It is otherwise with Pandora, who tries her power over him again and wins. Thus what might have been forgiven becomes of tragic significance.

Ridge, W: Pett. The Kennedy people. N. Y., Doran. 311 p. D $1.25 n.

Story of three generations—Old Man Kennedy, a self-made man of domineering temper, his son who wants to write plays and his grandson. The playwright got his affairs into a tangle, and went off to South Africa, never to come back. Cecily, his wife, thus began the struggle to bring up George in difficult circumstances. She carried it through, and said she was rewarded when George got a junior partnership in the firm because he was so clever about sugar.

Roche, Arth. Somers. Loot; il. by M. Leone Bracker. Indianapolis, Bobbs-Merrill. c. 320 p. pls. D $1.25 n.

Snapped at the height of the Grey Ghost's career, like a rapidly shown film, we watch the events of his most daring crime. He accomplishes the looting of a big jewelry firm, only to have his enterprise fail and himself to be driven to suicide, because the beautiful Morn Light has fallen in love with one of the victims and means to rescue him. This young Englishman is not the owner of the $2,000,000 necklace, only the agent sent to deliver it, (and anyhow what are diamonds to a light opera star like Morn?).

Rosenberg, L: Ja. Scraps and bits. N. Y., Fenno. c. 7+98 p. D 75 c. n.

Partial contents: Ernst Haeckel—the apostle of Monism; A study in punishment—a lesson from Shakespeare: Charity; Zangwill's "Melting Pot"; Casa Savoi: a response.

Ross, Percy. Youth unconquerable. N. Y., Doran. 354 p. D $1.25 n.

It would have been much more practical if Cherry had had some money instead of some guardians. They were an Italian count and a Welshman, appointed by her father's will, and the Duke of Skye, appointed by himself. The Welshman carried her off to his castle and made desperate and melancholy love to her, from which the Duke rescued her. Cherry was determined to finish her term at Oxford and then to earn her living. She had rather a time of it; but in spite of economics, education and guardians, youth and the Duke conquered.

Does Careful Attention to Every Detail Pay?

Sometimes we think that we are too particular; that our effort to give a little better service and a little better quality in every department than the other fellow is not always appreciated. However, the following which we quote from a letter just received convinces us that our policy is right and that it does pay.

"The Dead Musician" came yesterday. It is a beautiful book, surpassing my highest hopes. I congratulate you most sincerely upon such excellent accomplishment, and profoundly thank you. It is the handsomest book of verse I have seen in years. I think that you have really set a new standard. . . . It has a complete simplicity of distinction which makes it wholly charming. Again I must thank you for making "The Dead Musician" a joy forever.

Episodes of a Quaint Countryside

A New Novel by

John M. Sooy

Decorative Jacket. Frontispiece in Halftone. $1.35 net

Every chapter of this work appeals to your sense of humor or vindication — strongly. The press unreservedly speak of it as an unusual book. The writer's diction is forceful, and its subject matter is often expressed with that exquisite charm which is in itself a delight.

What is said by "Old Penn," the official weekly of the U. of Pa., one of the most conservative journals in its critical reviews:

"Episodes of a Quaint Countryside," by John M. Sooy. The Wendell Sooy Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

This strikingly original and interesting book is a work of unusual merit. The scene is laid in a quaint village on the Atlantic seaboard, and its fisher and farm folk, together with the brigandage of a band of daring wreckers infesting the neighboring beaches in the early forties, furnish a large share of its subject matter. Although there are numerous occasions for a good laugh in the recital of the incidental happenings, the book is not without its serious side. The writer is a retired physician having that matured experience and culture which needs must give an assurance of a certain standard. Besides this there is present that indescribable something—that asset, if we may so express it, that creates and maintains throughout a pleasurable interest—a quality which the successful novel cannot afford to be without.

The Sins of the Children

By COSMO HAMILTON

Author of "The Blindness of Virtue"

Coming October 14th

"The advance sheets of 'The Sins of the Children' came last night, and I sat up until the 'wee sma' hours' reading it. It certainly is a BIG BOOK."

This is an extract from the first letter we have received from a reader of this vital novel of American family life. Don't miss your chance to get in on the biggest, most active, result-producing campaign we have ever undertaken. "THE SINS OF THE CHILDREN" is a book that will sell wherever it is known, and we are going to make it known everywhere. We have just ordered an additional window display which the makers call "the most attractive" they have ever made. Just another step in our campaign to bring the buyers to your doors.

Have you ordered your supply of booklets, postcards, etc.?
